Walter Isard Dissertation Award

At this meeting the Society will bestow the Walter Isard Award upon the author of the best dissertation in peace science completed in the period 1996-1998. The award is intended to honor outstanding contributions to the scientific knowledge of peace and conflict and carries a value of $1,000. The nominated dissertations are:

Security Policy Choices: Foreign Policy Behavior as a Function of Threat, Capability, and Government Structure, Sean Bolks, Rice University, 1998.

Comprehending Cooperation: Credible Commitments and International Relations, Brett Ashley Leeds, Emory University, 1998.

The Systemic Democratic Peace, Sara McLaughlin, Michigan State University, 1997.

Peace in Anarchy: Democratic Governance and International Conflict, Michael Mousseau, SUNY at Binghamton, 1998.

Arms Races and the Escalation of Disputes to War, Susan Sample, Vanderbilt University, 1996.

The next competition will be open to students of any nationality who successfully defend a doctoral dissertation between April 1, 1998 and March 31, 2000 in any field on the subject of peace science, conflict behavior, international relations, or a related topic. The winner will be selected on the basis of the importance and scientific significance of the dissertation with respect to the field of peace science and its contribution to the understanding of international behavior more generally. Dissertations may be nominated for consideration for the award by any member of an individual's dissertation committee. Nomination is made by letter to the Executive Secretary of the Peace Science Society. The letter should outline the contents of the dissertation, including the literature addressed, subject matter, findings and contributions, and include a current curriculum vitae of the nominee. Interested persons should contact the Executive Secretary.
